‘a soapbox for Alachua County activists’

International law violations are ... A threat to world peace

The following remarks, as prepared for presentation, were made by Jeffrey D. Sachs, president of the UN Sustainable Development Solutions Network and director of the Center for Sustainable Development at Columbia University, during an emergency meeting of the UN Security Council in New York City on Jan. 5.

Mr. President,
Distinguished Members of the Security Council,

The issue before the Council today is not the character of the government of Venezuela.

The issue is whether any Member State — by force, coercion, or economic strangulation — has the right to determine Venezuela's political future or to exercise control over its affairs.

This question goes directly to Article 2(4) of the United Nations Charter, which prohibits the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state.

The Council must decide whether that prohibition is to be upheld or abandoned.

Abandoning it would carry consequences of the gravest kind.

Background and context

Since 1947, United States foreign policy has repeatedly employed force, covert action, and political manipulation to bring about regime change in other countries. This is a matter of carefully documented historical record. In her book Covert Regime Change (2018), political scientist Lindsey O'Rourke documents 70 attempted US regime-change operations between 1947 and 1989 alone.

These practices did not end with the Cold War. Since 1989, major United States regime-change operations undertaken without authorization by the Security Council have included, among the most consequential: Iraq (2003), Libya (2011), Syria (from 2011), Honduras (2009), Ukraine (2014), and Venezuela (from 2002 onward).

The methods employed are well established and well document-

Our kids in the ICE age

by Michael Sheffield, Communications / Social Media / Assistant Climate Justice, Farmworker Association of Florida

Nowhere is safe for an immigrant child. There is no place for them to be free from harassment, bullying, or police violence.

Many of these children have developed anxiety, depression, or other medical issues as a result of losing their families or from the turmoil that their families have been subjected to. But this ICE occupation of our neighborhoods impacts ALL children, not just immigrant children.

All children are watching the extreme violence against their neighbors broadcasted 24/7 through the media. Kids are being bullied in school for the color of their skin. Teachers and students are being dragged out of their classrooms. This is the reality our immigrant communities are facing today. We're all witnessing the violence real time.

My name is Michael Sheffield. My colleagues at the Farmworker Association of Florida are here to tell you about the impact of ICE on our communities. We are here to tell you that our kids are in the ICE age.

The Iguana mission:

We believe in advocacy journalism and strive to deliver grassroots progressive news written by those on the ground. We aim to engage readers, get them thinking critically, and ultimately join the activists who fill our pages in the fight for a more just, equitable world. We're also a community calendar, promoting cultural events, because we believe having fun and enriching the heart and soul are as important as engaging the mind when it comes to community building and solidarity.

Crash Pad celebrates 30 years

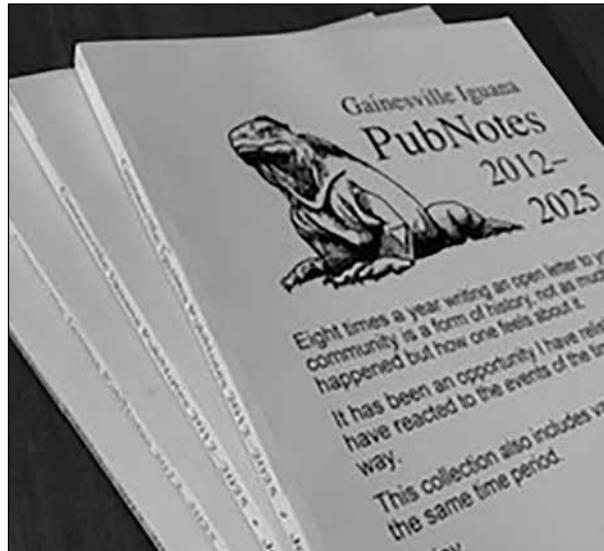

by Doug Clifford

Legendary Gainesville punk band Crash Pad is celebrating their 30-year anniversary this year. Crash Pad played their first gig in March 1996 at the original Hardback Cafe. On Friday, Jan. 16, they will be playing a benefit for listener supported WGOT 100.1/wgot.org at Vecino's at 208 W. University in Gainesville. The Rick Ryan Band and Tapeworm will open.

Current members of Crash Pad are Brian Krashpad, J.T. Krashpad, "Gimme" Mick Raymond and Mitch Estic. Guitar/vocalist Brian Krashpad says his main influences are original mid-70 punk bands, like the Clash, Ramones, Damned and 999.

Expect an all original set on Jan. 16. WGOT Station Manager Doug Clifford says WGOT is in dire financial straits, including $3200 for past tower rent. Donations can also be made through wgot.org or by mail to 433 S. Main St. Gainesville, 32601, in care of the Civic Media Center. Another benefit is tentatively set for Feb. 5 with Grant Peebles at The Bull. ↗

Iguana anthology available

"PubNotes 2012-2025" is a collection of 180 pages of commentary and assorted articles that ran in the Iguana over a period of 13 years. It will be available at the Cypress & Grove Market on Mondays, at the Sunshine State Book Fair at Santa Fe College's Fine Arts Hall on Jan. 24, or you can email gainesvilleiguana@cox.net for more information on how you can get a copy. The books cost $25 each to print, and shipping is $5. Local delivery can be arranged. There are only 30 left. ↗

2026, and here we are

Before getting into things I want to reflect on the very positive last few months of my life, and just say how grateful I am for all the heartwarming feedback I've gotten. Starting with the book launch Oct. 1 at First Mag marking my 50 years in Gainesville, the front-page profile in the Gainesville Sun in December, and right through to being Grand Marshall of the very successful Flying Pig Parade on Jan. 3, it's been a hoot. The "PubNotes 2012–2025" book has sold 170 of the 200 copies printed, which makes me very happy as well.

Thank you to everyone who has taken time to express their appreciation to me; this path my life has taken me here in Gainesville I do not take for granted, and the supportive community we are is what makes what I do possible. Our little team of Beth Grobman, Pierce Butler and Jessica Newman, aided by the many folks who've written what we've printed, and those who have financially supported us over all the years, now have us here with the printing of Vol. 40, Issue 1/2. Yes, forty years.

Doing these PubNotes gives me a sense of responsibility to be a clear explainer, and also to try and be clear in my own understanding of what's going on in the world. This attack on Venezuela has me looking back to 2003 and the invasion of Iraq. I think about the hubris of Rumsfeld and Cheney, the way they thought they could breeze right in, that it would be a "cakewalk," discounting the complex realities of all the various factions in Iraq, and unleashing of regional violence and huge body count on all sides.

What will be the blowback to this operation? Who knows? Yesterday I heard the president of Colombia had a good phone call with Trump. Is he just bowing to the king? Will Venezuelans who were tired of Maduro (many are; authoritarians are no fun) pull together and actually have free elections, or is the current government so entrenched that it will get thwarted? Will the oil companies tell Trump, "Thanks but no thanks"? My bet is on troubles over favorable outcomes, because that is certainly the track record of U.S. interventions. In the future we will see it unfold.

Regarding the murder of Renee Noelle Good, this comment from Heather Cox Richardson: "That both DHS and Trump posted false accounts of the shooting even as there are four videos circulating that reveal those accounts to be lies, shows they no longer are making any attempt to justify their actions. Instead, they are demanding Americans abandon reality in favor of whatever the administration says. If this works, it would be a demonstration of totalitarian power, the ability to control how people think. Accepting that lie is a loyalty test." For me she is required reading every day. ICE is provoking the violence, daring it to happen.

"Silence is complicity" was a common slogan in the fight against AIDS in the 1980s and 90s. We are there again, friends, and each of us needs to recognize it, and face it; we are here in a country that has slid into fascism. Our man/boy president speaks lies and nonsense almost continuously. His lackeys praise him and attempt to implement his wishes. The dominant corporate media basically normalizes his behavior. His party and the Supreme Court seem just fine with it. Their paramilitary ICE are a force of repression to try and bait us into open struggle, the end goal being canceled elections in 2026. And then there's the disregard for International Law. Buy Greenland? Attack Mexico? Attack Iran? Really?

It must be a combination of strategic plays at the top and pressure from below to turn this around. Our pressure from below needs to not blunder into violence in reaction to provocation, but show our numbers and commitment. It won't be quick, it may get messy, but we need to support each other, help our neighbors, and share in the work.

And my personal thanks to all the sign makers, the sign holders, the phone callers, letter writers, event organizers, creative artists, you readers, and the sharers of information however you do it. It is making a difference. Losing hope is the one thing we can't afford. We hope our work here can help sustain you in maintaining yours. ☀*

For real threats to Florida's working families, look to Tallahassee as well as D.C.

by Jason Bellamy-Fults and the FL AFL-CIO

Despite the Florida legislature's unrelenting assault on working people and our right to collective bargaining, we're still here, standing strong and fighting back.

Thankfully, in the 2025 Legislative Session, the tides began to change. Following his disastrous bid for the presidency, Ron DeSantis's grip on the legislature has begun to slip, with each day leading the wannabe emperor to increasing irrelevancy as the legislature re-orientates itself towards the 2026 election.

The new political atmosphere and steadfast resilience of Florida's labor community led to us winning eight out of ten of our most serious fights for Florida's workers last session, including:

- Stopping further attacks on the collective bargaining rights of our public sector workers.
- Protecting Florida's child labor laws from further erosion.

- Defending Florida's existing minimum wage rights.
- Protecting over a million temporary workers by saving the Labor Pool Act from attempts at repeal.
- Preserving easier access to what is left of Florida's vital unemployment insurance system.
- Stopping the special interests and the legislature from imposing term limits on our school boards and county commissions.

Note that all of these fights were defensive in nature. It's clear that we have a long way to go if we're going to do anything other than blunt the worst impulses of our legislature's bought and paid for corporate hacks. It's also worth remembering that currently, only about 6 percent of Floridians are represented by a union. Whether that number trends downward to zero, as those in power would like, or ticks upward, it is up to us and how hard we're willing to fight for our rights.

We hope that all of our union brothers and sisters who are able to will sign up to be a part of this year's Working Family Lobby Corps (tinyurl.com/Iguana2340) and join us in Tallahassee for a few days alongside fellow union members. This year's session will take place (tentatively) from Jan. 13 through March 13.

thinking about the 2026 midterm elections. Rep. Kat Cammack, who has been in lockstep with President Trump's anti-worker agenda, will be up for reelection. In addition, 4 out of 5 of Alachua County's legislative delegation seats will be up for election.

Incumbent Senators Jennifer Bradley and Chad Johnson are running for reelection and each has a pretty abysmal past voting record on issues that matter to us. Rep. Chuck Brannan is term-limited for his seat, so there will be a vacancy there. And Rep. Hinson, who has been one of our stronger allies, is stepping down. Thus far, there are multiple contenders vying for her seat.

Now is a great time to get involved with helping people register to vote and educating ourselves and others on how our elected representatives have performed.

Take some time to talk to your neighbors and co-workers, work with candidates that you support, and volunteer with civic organizations in your community so that as November approaches, we are prepared to turn out voters who support our issues. Don't believe the media hype about election "waves" and think that this is going to happen on its own. It will happen when we organize and make it happen. As the old saying goes, "if you stay ready, you ain't gotta get ready!"

Below is an additional list of Florida specific 2026 deadlines and election dates worth keeping in mind as we near the next opportunity to make clear the priorities of workers everywhere and elect representatives who fight for the people!

- Primary voter/party registration deadline: July 20
- Primary Election Day: Aug. 18
- Voter registration deadline: Oct. 5
- Deadline to request a mailed ballot: Oct. 22
- General Election Early Voting Period: Oct. 24-31* (dates may vary by voting district)

• General Election Day: Nov. 3

Stay tuned! We'll close this column with some words from our state AFL-CIO President, Kimberly Holbridge:

The road of the 2025 legislative session — federally and statewide — presented a full slate of antiworker and antihuman rhetoric.

And yet, our union family continued to fight. Why? Because we know that an injury to one is an injury to all.

As we look ahead to 2026, we know the challenges will not disappear. But neither will our resolve. We will continue to defend the dignity of work, protect our families, and demand justice for every worker. Our strength lies in our unity, and our unity is unbreakable.

Thank you for your courage, your persistence, and your unwavering belief in the power of collective action. Together, we are not only resisting — we are building a future where workers thrive and communities flourish. ↗

Grand time at Flying Pig Parade

The Flying Pig Parade, an annual festivity held this year on Jan. 3, celebrated the whimsical spirit of the Gainesville community. This year's theme was, "They who shun whimsy shall suffer rigor mortis before death." Over 50 groups participated in the parade, which started and ended at Bo Diddley Plaza, with quirky floats, performances and community spirit. Organized by Glenn Terry, Iguana publisher Joe Courter acted as grand marshal, overseeing giant puppets, off-beat bands, and dancing dinosaurs. Photos/photo collage by Chuck Ross. ↗

Seniors should be aware this election year

by Mary Savage

Senior citizens can expect to see only a 2.8 percent Social Security Cost of Living Adjustment for 2026. This won't be enough for seniors struggling to pay bills in this economy. It will be the second-lowest COLA since 2021 and only slightly higher than the 2025 COLA.

Any increase in benefits helps, but the 2026 COLA will be gone because of the hike in Medicare Part B premiums. On average, retirees will see about $56 more per month next year from Social Security. But nearly a third of that will be gone because of the Medicare Part B increase.

Medicare Part B is projected to rise to $202.90 a month starting in January. That's nearly $18 more than in 2025 and will be the first time the premium exceeds $200. Seniors on fixed incomes should be concerned that the Social Security COLA won't keep up with inflation.

Have you seen the prices of groceries, prescriptions and housing? Instead of working to protect Social Security, too many members of Congress want to raise the retirement age, cut benefits and even privatize the program.

Who remembers when the maniacal Elon Musk and his dystopian Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) abruptly entered the Social Security Administration last winter, seized the personal Social Security data of Americans and disrupted agency operations?

The New York Times published a report just before Christmas that revealed the DOGE crusade to cut government "waste, fraud and abuse" was a big sham. According to the Times, DOGE did not do what Musk said – reduce federal spending by $1 trillion before October. "On DOGE's watch, federal spending did not go down at all. It went up."

Older Americans have earned these benefits through a lifetime of work and should not have to fight to keep them. Thankfully, good reporting by ProPublica, and other publications, exposed the Trump regime's plan to cut 830,000 mostly blue-collar workers from Social Security disability eligibility.

After Social Security champions Sen. Elizabeth Warren, Rep. John Larson and others spoke up, the Trump regime dropped its diabolical plan.

This year is an election year. Seniors should be mindful of how their congressional representative and two U.S. senators vote on legislation that impacts them. Give their office a call and say seniors are aware and we vote.

New bills proposed to restore the Ocklawaha

by Jennifer Carr

On Jan. 5 Senator Jason Brodeur and Representative Wyman Duggan filed identical bills (House Bill 981 and Senate Bill 1066, respectively) creating the “Northeast Florida Rivers, Springs, and Community Investment Act.”

This historic legislation requires the Florida Department of Environmental Protection to hire a project lead to oversee the implementation of the act; requiring the department to develop, by a specified date, a project plan for the restoration of the Ocklawaha River; providing that the project plan is an environmental restoration or enhancement project subject to a general permit from the department and water management districts; creating the Northeast Florida River and Springs Recreation and Economic Development Advisory Council, etc., to restore the Ocklawaha River by the end of 2032.

Thankfully FDEP has a head start on restoration planning considering that they've had the plan written out since 1997.

Join me in thanking Senator Brodeur and Rep. Duggan for filing these bills to restore our rivers and vital habitat for manatees and other wildlife, protect rural communities, increase recreational opportunities and benefit local economies.

According to the 2001 United States Forest Service Final Environmental Impact Statement For the Occupancy and Use of National Forest Lands and Ocklawaha River Restoration, the aesthetic resources which describe the physical characteristics of a landscape that determine its scenic quality in relevant value to the viewing public, will evolve, “over time, the project area would succeed to floodplain forest with a river channel flowing Beginning Jan. 3, and continuing through Dec. 31, Alachua County residents can drop off food waste at the County's five Rural Collection Centers for composting.

Alachua County has partnered with O-Town Compost through a Circular Economy Grant, which will divert food waste from the landfill and turn it into compost so it may be used by farmers, gardeners, landscapers, and others.

through it. The reservoir and associated marsh and vegetation would be reduced substantially. At a finer-grained level, however, the complexity and diversity of a mature and self-maintaining floodplain forest would result in increased diversity of habitat characterized by the small changes in elevation and hydrology of the restored conditions. Evidence of the works of man would be less noticeable, particularly from the river, as the twists and turns of the river reduce sight distances. Settings would be more oriented to the more remote and semi-primitive settings of a natural floodplain forest. The reservoir and associated marsh would be replaced by a riverine system. The shift in aesthetics would be to a meandering river channel with overhanging trees and lake attractions would be replaced with riverine boating and fishing, camping, and hiking.”

I appreciate their commitment to restoration, expanded recreational opportunities and promoting economic growth along the 217-mile Great Florida Riverway. I will be supporting SB 1066 and HB 981 through the 2026 Legislative Session. I'm grateful we have leaders in the Capitol who recognize the statewide value of reuniting the Silver River, Ocklawaha River, and St. Johns River. I thank them for being a strong voice for Northeast Florida's rivers, springs, and communities and leading the effort to restore the Ocklawaha River. *

Building a Florida where safety comes first

by Amy Trask

I believe in a Florida that is just, that is compassionate, that creates people-first policies, and looks out for every neighbor that lives here. I believe that we are all inherently deserving of dignity, of safety, and of protection.

Last year, I wrote the HAVEN Act because I knew that the moment a victim of violence tries to leave is the most dangerous time in an abusive relationship, and that calling 911 brings an abuser from zero to ten in a moment's time. I wrote it so that victims of violence could live to become survivors, and so that those walking in the shoes I once had, had an opportunity to leave and rebuild.

When I was writing it, as I reflected on my own journey and on those of others, I saw more and more holes in our laws. I kept coming back to a line from National Treasure: "When there is a problem, those with the ability to act have a responsibility to act."

For me, that responsibility has never been individual — it's something shared by survivors, advocates, and anyone who sees the gaps clearly enough that they can no longer look away. Those of us who've lived through harm understand what's at stake, and while I don't claim to have all the answers, I do have the ability to listen, to work, to research, and to fight for better laws. That's the responsibility I take seriously. It's what fueled me this year to keep pushing for change that protects children, survivors, and families, because every family deserves the chance to live free from fear and violence.

Together with community advocates, survivors, and partners on both sides of the aisle, this year, we are moving legislation that puts people first and proves what's possible when we refuse to accept that doing nothing is the default.

The issues we're highlighting reach every community and they demand responses that put Floridians above politics. Most of the bills we drafted — and the ones that have been introduced — have earned bipartisan support, and work to expand safety, dignity, and justice for survivors and for children navigating complex legal systems and abuse. I'm grateful for the partnerships we've built and the testimonies we've heard in support, and that momentum gives me real hope that change is on the horizon.

Bills that have been introduced

Each of these bills addresses a different point of vulnerability — and together, they form a safety net our state has long needed:

Re-filed is the Helping Abuse Victims Escape Violence Now (HAVEN) Act (HB 269, SB 296) bill, which is sponsored by Minority Leader Senator Berman and Representative Gossett-Seidman. The bill creates a discreet, web-based alert system that allows survivors to signal for help with a unique pin number or code word and randomly generated phone number. This is a first in the nation, as it modernizes emergency response and ensures survivors can access protection in moments when speaking out loud could escalate danger. We actually just passed our first Senate Committee hearing just before Christmas.

The Safe Shelter Act (HB 435, SB 516), sponsored by Representative Campbell and Senator Jones, closes a dangerous and devastating loophole in the statutes that forces children back into unsafe homes, rather than remaining in shelters, when the previous location was approved through home study. This bill ensures that parents never have to choose between safety and custody when fleeing abuse. It authorizes courts to place children and their caregivers in certified domestic violence shelters during emergencies. The bill also prevents the Department of Children and Families from forcing a child back into a previously studied home simply because a home study exists, instead requiring judges to weigh the totality of circumstances, thus closing a dangerous gap in Florida's child welfare system.

The Fostering with Dignity Act (HB 279, SB 306), sponsored by Representative Bartleman and Minority Leader Berman, ends the practice of foster youth carrying their belongings in trash bags by establishing a statewide program to provide duffel bags, suitcases, or backpacks – affirming dignity during one of life's most difficult transitions. The bill recognizes that the way children are treated during transitions shapes their sense of worth and stability.

The Survivor Safety Act (HB 1127, SB 1228), sponsored by Representative Rayner and Senator DiCeglie and is set to be introduced this Session, modernizes self-defense law to ensure that Florida's justice system reflects the realities of coercive control and survival. The bill shifts the burden of proof from the victim to the prosecution by creating the first rebuttable presumption of reasonable fear and self defense for survivors who use force against documented abusers, authorizes trauma-informed training for law enforcement, prosecutors, and judges, and establishes a review panel to re-examine past convictions where abuse evidence was overlooked.

Survivors of violence and children deserve more than reactive systems – they deserve systemic protections and proactive policies that safeguard dignity, safety, and justice. These bills translate lived experience into lasting reform, ensuring our institutions respond with compassion and effectiveness. Florida has the opportunity to lead with survivor centered policies that not only address immediate needs but build a stronger, fairer child welfare and justice system for the future.

When our laws reflect compassion and fairness, and when they build real support for those desperately seeking safety, we strengthen the fabric of our communities and ensure the most vulnerable are never left behind. Surviving should never be the ceiling – and it should never be the end of our stories.

GRU under threat

by Chuck Ross

If the GRU Authority (GRUA) maintains control over the utility, it may not be a self-reliant energy producer within the next decade.

The GRUA has failed to provide clear answers about GRU's future operations. At the Oct. 7, 2024 meeting, CEO Ed Bielarski halted the established Integrated Resources Plan (IRP), stopping the necessary planning for GRU. Bielarski informed us that he will push power generators providing over half of GRU's capacity past their life expectancy over the next 5 to 6 years. (These are the same generation systems Bielarski labeled as outdated and inefficient at the Jan. 16, 2020 City Commission meeting.) And then what? The plan is the future obsolescence of our power generator systems.

There are currently no plans to replace the generators. Without plans, our utility will have to depend on third-party power sources such as Florida Power & Light or Duke Energy. GRU risks losing self-reliance, and the GRUA has not acted to prevent this.

On Feb. 7, 2025, Bielarski signed an agreement with Duke Energy to supply substantial power using upgraded transmission lines that will be connected to the transmission system that distributes power to GRU. The GRUA has not disclosed this information or what the project will cost. Questions have been put to the GRUA regarding these matters, but no plausible answers have been given. Our power company is keeping us in the dark.

The GRUA meets on the 2nd Wednesday of the month at 5:30pm. If you share our concerns and want to join in the effort to return GRU to local control, please reach out to Jyoti Parmar at 352-641-0095.

Chuck Ross has regularly attended GRUA meetings since the DeSantis appointees assumed control in late 2023. He is a retired CPA with over 40 years of experience and is an Executive Board member of the Sierra Club Suwannee St. Johns Group. ☀

Faith as a weapon: Inside America's theocratic vanguard

from Global Project against Hate and Extremism ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2334

The Global Project Against Hate and Extremism (GPAHE), founded in 2020 by two alumnae of the Southern Poverty Law Center, reports on “the transnational spread of far-right extremism and hate, particularly U.S.-based activity that is exported to other countries” with in-depth overviews of right-wing extremists. Their “Faith As A Weapon” profile of Christian Nationalism provides an excellent introduction (>18,000 words) to the well-organized and -financed campaign to replace US democracy with an extremist theocracy.

INFILTRATED! How the USA buys Greenland's elite from Danish News in English ~ video (9:50) ~ Jan. 2 ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2341

While Trump threatens military action against Greenland, a quieter takeover is already happening. This investigation exposes how Ronald Lauder — Trump's billionaire friend, who planted the Greenland idea in 2017 — is systematically buying into Greenland's economy through a Delaware corporation called Greenland Development Partners.

The problem is not the investments. It's his business partners. It's the husband of Greenland's Foreign Minister and other politically connected elites.

The phony war on Christians: Inventing persecution where none exists

by Diane Roberts ~ Florida Phoenix ~ Dec. 15 ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2331

The idea of a widespread cultural war on Christians in the U.S. is largely exaggerated and doesn't reflect reality. This narrative is traced back to the old “War on Christmas,” where some conservatives perceived ordinary secular trends as hostile attacks on Christian traditions. This obsession distracts from deeper societal issues and that claims of such a “war” are often more about politics and culture wars than actual widespread harassment of Christians.

Can students fail an assignment if they cite God? Not if Florida Republicans get their way

by Hemant Mehta ~ Friendly Atheist ~ Dec. 31 ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2343

Two Florida Republicans have introduced a bill that would prevent public school teachers from punishing students for expressing their religious beliefs on an assignment. It's an invitation to bad-faith claims of discrimination that could make life harder for instructors while exhausting school districts into submission.

What's driving U.S. escalation on Venezuela? Avila Chomsky explains

by Jyotishman Mudiar ~ India & Global Left ~ video (1:02) Nov. 14 ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2333

Mudiar speaks with historian Aviva Chomsky, who breaks down what's driving U.S. escalation on Venezuela. They dive into the forces shaping Washington's approach — from corporate interests and oil politics to the Latin America hawks inside the Trump administration. Chomsky explains how immigration politics, U.S.-China competition in Latin America, and deep divisions within the U.S. Left over Maduro are reshaping policy and public debate. A clear, historical, and uncompromising look at why Venezuela is once again in Washington's crosshairs.

America the rogue state: The evisceration of the rule of law at home and abroad solidifies America as a rogue state by Chris Hedges ~ Films for Action ~ Jan. 5 ~ tinyurl.com/Iguana2339

Wanna be depressed? Read on: “Our democratic institutions are moribund. They are unable or unwilling to restrain our ruling gangster class. The lobby-infested Congress is a useless appendage. It surrendered its Constitutional authority, including the right to declare war and pass legislation, long ago ... The media, owned by corporations and oligarchs, from Jeff Bezos to Larry Ellison, is an echo chamber for the crimes of state, including the ongoing genocide of Palestinians ...” And that's just the beginning. ↗

Florida is a 'Fight to Work' state: State of the Graduate Assistants' Union

by Cassandra "Cassie" Urbenz,
UF-GAU Co-President

Class solidarity is more crucial now than ever as we watch higher education repeatedly coming under attack by the Florida legislature, which is intended to support and is responsible for funding our world-class education. This January marks the beginning of the legislative session, and we need to stay ready for what comes next. However, many other things are simultaneously threatening the graduate assistants who make our public university system's mission possible.

It is extremely disappointing to see UF, an institution with the shared mission of enabling students to lead and influence the next generation and beyond for the public good, continuously deny those who allow it to function a livable wage while threatening the stability of their labor union. Our bargaining unit of over 4,000 Graduate Assistants conducts life-saving and society-advancing research, teaches classes that shape the next generation, and provides administrative support to make all of that possible. After our impasse hearing in November and receiving a decision from a Special Magistrate, the University is doubling down on refusing to honor the 20-year Released Time program that has allowed for GAU to efficiently work for our members, and more recently, bear the increased administrative burden caused by SB-256. This handful of graduate assistants maintains our communications, provides peer-to-peer support, gives guidance about UF resources, files our recertification with the Public Employee Relations Commission to retain our contract/bargaining rights, works collaboratively with administration on contract compliance, assists in bargaining, and provides grievance representation. As a result, we will have to go to the Board of Trustees at some time that is yet to be decided and collectively apply as much pressure as possible, or they will ignore the magistrate's recommendation and both refuse the much-needed raise AND remove this integral program.

This month also starts our recertification election, which is Jan. 8 through Feb. 5. Graduate assistants will receive ballots in the mail and be asked whether or not they would like to continue receiving representation from GAU. This is our second election, with us clearing a 99.6 percent approval vote last time. We are proud to have such unwavering support from our bargaining unit and look forward to more turnout, as bills were filed last session to potentially make winning these elections impossible for chapters like ours. During 2025, a proposal was brought forward to require 50 percent +1 of the bargaining unit to vote in approval for a successful election rather than the majority of those voting, something intentionally designed to use the inefficiency of mailing addresses and postage against us, despite our success.

The University's actions do the same, exemplified by their navigation of this impasse. While UF should be collaborating with us to fight for higher education, they continuously show their lack of a backbone and loyalty to Tallahassee by using the statutes to exploit a conflict of interest and refuse to invest in their workers.

Want to join our fight for a better life? Get in touch with us via email at organizing@ufgau.org, follow us on social media (@ufgau on Instagram), and keep an eye out for when we mobilize next. ✊

Fighting Authoritarianism:

A non-cooperation training hosted by National Women's Liberation

We will cover the authoritarian threat, stories of noncooperation in these times, how noncooperation has been used to defeat authoritarians and fascists, and what we — as part of a mass collective resistance movement across the U.S. — can do to meet this moment, fight back, and win.

This training will be delivered by NWL founding member and union organizer, Candi Churchill, using material (with encouragement and permission) from the Freedom Trainers (freedomtrainers.net/about/).

Learn skills to engage in brave conversations about fighting authoritarianism and recruit more people into the movement, so we can turn things around!

‘Passion Dey Couldn’t Steal’

New play resurrects Zora Neale Hurston’s story

by Pamela D. Marshall

Zora Neale Hurston was an anthropologist, folklorist, and award-winning novelist who carved the Black South into the pages of American literature. By all accounts, Zora Neale Hurston has never been easy to forget, though many tried.

In the play, “Passion Dey Couldn’t Steal: The Zora Neale Hurston Story,” Pamela D. Marshall channels the fire, wit, and fearless genius of one of Florida’s most enduring literary voices.

Hurston’s Eatonville, Florida, was the first self-governed Black township in the United States, a place that lived inside her and within her words. In her novels “Their Eyes Were Watching God,” “Jonah’s Gourd Vine,” and “Moses, Man of the Mountain,” Hurston captured the rhythms of speech, the music of survival, and the complexity of Black joy. Her work remains a cornerstone of Florida literature, echoing the spirit of the land that shaped her — the orange-scented air, the porch stories, and the laughter in the face of sorrow.

Through a sweeping one-woman performance that moves between song, monologue, and ancestral invocation, Pamela D. Marshall gives breath to three powerful women: Lucy Potts-Hurston, Zora’s mother, who taught her daughter to “jump at the sun;” Alice Walker, the writer who searched through thickets and weeds to find Zora’s unmarked grave and resurrect her legacy; and Zora, the “Genius of the South,” who wrote a people into permanence when the world tried to forget them.

Marshall’s “Passion Dey Couldn’t Steal” honors the Florida literary legacy while weaving her own creative journey into the tapestry. With each note and every line, the audience is invited to step into the spiritual lineage of women who refused to be silenced.

The play’s writing and development have inspired Marshall’s forthcoming book,

“The Zora In Me — When Zora Spoke, I Remembered My Name,” a work that explores how Hurston’s boldness has called her, and all women, to live unapologetically, to speak their truth, and to rise without permission. The book is scheduled for release this month and will be available at the Sunshine State Book Festival.

Fourteen big feminist wins in 2025: Progress is still possible

Ms. Magazine honors the wins that remind us that progress is still possible and lists 14 accomplishments from 2025:

1. An all-women's professional baseball league was created,
2. The FDA approved a generic abortion pill
3. The FDA took down its black box warning on estrogen products
4. Reproductive health advocates secured major wins for abortion access across the country
5. Hundreds of lawsuits this year challenged divisive federal policies
6. Transparency of the Epstein files was won

7. "Liberation" comes to Broadway
8. France updated its rape laws to focus on consent
9. Across the U.S., voters elected champions of women's rights
10. Pennsylvania elected its first openly trans mayor
11. Italy named femicide as part of its legal code
12. Robert E. Lee's Capitol statue was replaced with Barbara Rose Johns'
13. Brazil strengthened protections against gender-based violence
14. Thailand and Liechtenstein legalized same-sex marriage

GOP redistricting could backfire: urban, immigrant areas turn back to Democrats

GOP reversals in this year's elections, especially in some urban and immigrant communities, are setting off alarm bells for Republicans using redistricting to try to keep control of Congress in next year's midterms.

Redistricting plans demanded by President Donald Trump in states such as Texas and Missouri — meant to capitalize on his stronger showing among certain urban voters in the 2024 election — could backfire, as cities in Florida, New Jersey and Virginia returned to Democratic voting patterns in off-year elections in November.

Experts see the shift as a sign of possible souring on the administration's immigration enforcement agenda, combined with disappointment in economic conditions.

Inflatables, rainbow crosswalks, flooding snitch lines:

In the face of rising authoritarianism, creative action helped us break through the stranglehold of fear in 2025

The rise of authoritarianism in the United States had devastating consequences in 2025. It was a year of unrelenting injustice, maddening and terrifying at once.

However, amidst the cycles of heartbreak and hope, resistance surged to unprecedented levels. Along with mass demonstrations and powerful boycotts, there were countless acts of creative protest that rekindled spirits and kept us rising up. A few examples:

1. Acts of defiance, from booing Trump at football games to flipping off Trump Tower — people found numerous ways to voice their dissent, displeasure and defiance. Each time someone spoke up, it emboldened others to take a visible stand,

2. Boycotts and economic resistance, such as the historic turnout of 7 million people at the No Kings protests in the U.S. in October, which offered a high-visibility glimpse of the movement's strength — the most powerful strategic engine of the anti-authoritarian movement has been its economic resistance, and
3. Rainbow crosswalks that Gov. Ron DeSantis ordered officials to paint over spurred community action as residents repainted crosswalks every time officials removed the paint.

Trump shedding support among Latino voters

A majority of U.S. Latinos have grown pessimistic since the 2024 presidential election and increasingly disapprove of the immigration and economic policies of the second Trump administration, according to the Pew Research Center.

About 70% of them disapprove of President Donald Trump's record, with 65% disapproving of his handling of immigration and 61% saying his policies have worsened the economy.

The study found deep disapproval of the Trump administration's immigration policies, amid aggressive immigration enforcement operations in areas with large Latino immigrant populations.

A better future is possible with the DSA

by Alachua County
Democratic Socialists of America

The headlines lately have been bleak.

Donald Trump and former Florida senator Marco Rubio have kidnapped Venezuela's president, Nicolas Maduro, and launched airstrikes in an imperialist attempt at regime change with the clear intention of installing capitalist oligarchs to steal the country's oil.

The US continues to support Israeli apartheid and genocide in both Gaza and the West Bank.

Police-state tactics are on full display during immigration raids in our workplaces, schools, and neighborhoods.

Institutions across academia and the media increasingly are bowing to the demands of an autocratic, fascist regime.

Amidst it all, President Trump, his family, and his friends raid the pockets of the American people while sneering at any sense of democratic oversight or the common good.

Despite these scenes of horror, though, glimmers of light are peeking through. Across the country, people are coming to gether to reject the forces of fascism and exploitation.

Thousands of striking baristas organizing with Starbucks Workers United have drawn attention to the poor pay and chronic understaffing that produces your daily cup of coffee.

Hundreds of thousands of people turned out for No Kings protests rejecting the Trump administration's claims to more and more power.

In New York City, the financial center of global capital, the democratic socialist Zohran Mamdani shocked the forces of conservatism and the Democratic establishment to win the mayoral election and was inaugurated just days ago.

And here in Florida, Richie Floyd serves as a voice of the people on the St. Petersburg City Council.

We in the Alachua County Democratic Socialists of America are working to bring this spirit of people power here to North Central Florida. Ours is a fight against inequality, fascism, and above all the exploitative forces of capitalism.

Capitalism is not natural or inevitable. It is created by human beings and its value comes from us and the work we do together. However, its benefits are concentrated in the hands of an increasingly rancid class of despotic billionaires. As democratic socialists, we seek a different system, one that rejects economic exploitation and recognizes the inherent equality and dignity of all people, regardless of race, gender expression, or wealth. This is socialism — a system whereby the fruits of social production are enjoyed by all, from each according to one's ability and to each according to one's need.

Democratic Socialists of America (DSA) is a big-tent, multi-tendency organization.

We are not committed to any single theory or framework for understanding society; rather, we are committed to drawing in leftists interested in socialist and radical politics and activism.

We want to bring these politics to the fore in Alachua County. DSA's theory of change is not centered around raising money to buy elections, only for our elected officials to turn around and ignore us. Instead, our power lies in the untapped potential of the working class, organized and working together to remake society and bring about a better world.

Our chapter is new and growing, with several committees hard at work and more to come. Our Housing Justice Committee is working to educate tenants on their legal rights and to develop policies to help Gainesville and Alachua County build new public housing and ensure that everyone has access to safe, affordable homes. Our Political Education Committee hosts monthly Socialist Night Schools exploring topics like American fascism, the labor movement, and immigration, DSA 101 events designed for new and prospective members, and Socialist Forums where the chapter and community come together to discuss political issues, economic conditions, and socialist theory.

As we grow as a chapter, we look forward to developing new campaigns and initiatives. By joining, you can help us shape the future of Alachua County, the state of Florida, and beyond.

Over the next month, we are hosting several events, all of which will be held at the Quaker Meeting House (702 NW 38th St.). The Political Education Committee will be hosting a Socialist Forum discussing Zohran Mamdani's victory, his political platform, and municipal socialism more broadly on Thursday, Jan. 15 at 6pm. Our General Body Meeting will be held on Saturday, Jan 31 from 2-4pm. Finally, our Socialist Night School series will return Thursday, Feb. 12 at 6pm.

Working together, a better world is possible. We stand against the barbarism of fascist imperialism and seek the freedom, equality, and true democracy that only socialism can bring. If you are interested in checking out our chapter, please reach out to us at alachuadsa@gmail.com, visit our website alachuadsa.org, or come see us in person at one of our events above. Join us today, and we can get to work making this better world a reality. ☮ worker Association of Florida and I have listened to the stories of grieving families in our community for the past year. FWAF is a 42-year-old, grassroots, farmworker-led, community-based organization with five offices in the state. While we are one of the oldest immigrants' rights and farmworker justice organizations in the state, we never thought we would see such deep pain inflicted on our community.

FWAF has earned the trust of families in our communities, who come to us seeking help. Our staff monitors ICE activity, accompanies people to their court appointments, documents cases of detentions, deportations and racial profiling, and helps family members search for their fathers, mothers, siblings, and children when they get "lost" in the system.

Here are some of the stories we've chosen to highlight to give voice to our kids, both those targeted and caught in the crossfire of ICE.

On Aug. 15, several adults were detained in front of Apopka High School (just north of Orlando) as the students were arriving to school. Though no students were detained, many of the Hispanic students worried about their parents being questioned or detained in the drop-off line. Other students made racist comments online about the event which created a hostile environment.

ment for all of the Hispanic students at the school. There are now reports of racially-motivated bullying in the Apopka area against students who go to school every day praying they'll see their parents again when they return.

On Dec. 5 in Apopka, we received a letter from a little girl addressed to Santa Claus asking him not for toys or clothes, but only to "please make the kids have a good Christmas. please make the polis stop please Santa". She says earlier, "im sad for the kids crying. I feel bad."

On Dec. 13, a family received a letter from DHS telling them their asylum cases were closed, that the safe haven they had been fighting to make their home for years was no longer in reach, and that they'd be fined $500 dollars for EVERY DAY since 2022 (over $500k) they had remained in the country, legally pursuing their immigration cases.

The mother of the family came to us at FWAF, asking us to legally sign over temporary guardianship of her youngest child, a fourteen-month-old with Down syndrome who just had open-heart surgery, to her niece who's a citizen. She's worried that otherwise, if she's deported after 12 years as a refugee in this country, her child will be deported with her and will not be able to receive the life-saving treatments she needs in Honduras.

She came here simply seeking peace in a place that told her and hundreds of thousands of other families that they'd be welcomed with open arms. Now, she's being suddenly uprooted, fined like a criminal, and forced to make a decision to leave her child behind that no mother should have to make. A simple letter in the mail, no empathy, leaving broken families behind to pick up the pieces of their lives.

This is happening all over the country.

A college freshman, Any Belloza, was deported against federal orders to a place she fled a decade ago on Nov. 20.

On Nov. 26, first-grader Yuanxin was lost in federal custody for over a week after being arrested with his father a third time since they fled torture in China.

A 7-year-old and his mother were abducted to Texas while visiting family on Thanksgiving, horrifying his school community in their Vermont hometown.

ICE in Minnesota stalked a young family home from the grocery store on Dec. 6, then held kids at gunpoint until housemates could prove they were residents.

We don't share these stories to exhaust you, but we can't do this alone. We help these families by doing what we can, but the truth is that the impact goes a lot deeper than anything we can fix. Once a parent is torn from their child, even if we can get them released and reunited, that trauma does not go away.

This must stop, as the damage that has already been done to the youth is irreversible, but with your support, we can keep this list from getting longer.

The Farmworker Association of Florida is disgusted by the continuous trauma to our youngest and most vulnerable members of society from exponentially increased ICE activity. Be on the right side of history. Speak up about how separating families, detaining kids, and traumatizing a whole generation is unjustifiable, not just when you see attacks happening in your community, but when you vote, and when you talk to your relatives and friends. Kids deserve better and we need your help to protect them. ↗

Oral History Program

History and the people who make it: Dr. Nikitah Imani

In this interview excerpt, Dr. Nikitah Okembe-Ra Imani, a professor at the University of Nebraska, talks about his experiences as a graduate student at UF and how he had to fight for his Black identity to be acknowledged on the campus. Imani [I] was interviewed by Daniela Lopez [L] on April 9, 2018. Transcript edited by Beth Grobman. Read the entire interview at tinyurl.com/Iguana2329.

L: You were one of the people who formed the 99. Can you go into detail from it being an idea to actually mobilizing and gathering the individuals who would do this sort of action?

I: The organization was created to pursue a wide variety of issues in the community. The name came from the notion that by 1999, which was well ahead at the time, that if certain critical things did not happen in the African-American community, the African Diaspora community, that it would not survive. That meant that a number of things had to happen with relationships with law enforcement, education, economics, politics. So the idea of the 99 was to try to meet that trajectory, to meet that deadline of 1999. If we haven't completed those things, at least begin to move in that direction.

The target was college students like ourselves because youth and college students are in a unique position to be able to do social activism without all the consequences of adults, as well as not having as many obligations, and so much of their activism can be tied into their educational experience that they can be better facilitators towards their activism. It is not an accident that most of the Black Panthers – the initial core – were graduate students.

I was a junior Panther. I was inspired by the Panthers both in terms of the organizational structure as well as their capacity to build coalitions with different groups and their economic, social and political agenda, in particular, their ten-point plan, which was an important part of what we wanted to pursue on a micro level even though they pursued it on a macro level.

We started the organization at UF by setting up informational tables. They were really just community education tables with books, films, and other things related to the African experience, Black power ideology, and so forth. We would set up a table like many other groups would do and we would just solicit people as they were going by.

We started to do film festivals on campus and in convenient locations off campus. We started getting questions from people, some of whom were supporters and some of whom were not. We went to great lengths to answer those questions and deal with those things. It was a perfect storm because as we got started there was a kind of right-wing backlash in Florida going on in Florida at the time – much like you have in the whole country right now.

You have police brutality starting to rise up. You had economic dislocation rising in the community. We weren't aware of it at the time, but we were perfect for the moment that was starting to begin in Florida. Other chapters began to spring up with our model. We were kind of a loose confederation in that each campus had its own leaders and we would visit some of those campuses to consult.

L: You guys would table, correct?

I: Yes. We tabled at open areas on campus – in the vicinity of the "Red Square" we called it. A lot of the areas right there in front of the Arts and Sciences. Sometimes over in the Plaza of the Americas, depending on the day. Sometimes we were out there with other organizations as part of things the University would be doing, and sometimes it would be more specific things.

We started having rallies on specific observance days, like Malcolm X day. We started having a rally every year. We would have a Columbus Day observance, where we would actually conduct a funeral for all the indigenous and Latino and Africans who were the victims of Columbus and the results of the discovery. We would park the actual hearse and bring the coffin out.

L: Oh yeah! I heard about the casket!

I: [Laughs] We were very much into scholarly presentations, but we also practiced disruption. Disruption often has a negative connotation, but our notion was constructive disruption. When we would be dealing with classes or scenarios where things were being taken for granted, we would show up. Just our presence was enough of a disruption that would provide a counterpoint to those instances.

An example of disruptive activity would be the funeral because you don't expect to see a full funeral with mourners dressed in black in the middle of campus in the middle of the day. That was exactly our point. You didn't expect this in the same way that indigenous people didn't expect this invasion by Europeans and so forth. We wanted to disrupt the day-to-day life of the community and the campus and draw attention to issues of social justice and equalities.

L: These demonstrations – would you say they were radical in any way?

I: I mean it depends on who's doing the defining. I go back to what Dr. King said in the Letter from Birmingham Jail. They called him a radical and I imagine if you are a person who argues that you should never, ever break the law, even if the law is unjust, then he was a radical.

If you are a person who believes in gradualism and that you are supposed to sit there and tolerate social injustice in perpetuity until those in power figure it out, then I guess that's radical.

My point is that I don't know of any social justice struggle that wasn't disruptive and I also don't know of any social justice struggle that ever went anywhere that didn't involve someone else on the opposite side of the equation who didn't think it was radical.

I don't consider radical a negative term. If you are going to call me a radical, call me a free radical because I'm that element that floats in the mix that makes things happen. I am the agitator in the washing machine. If you think about it, your clothes would never get clean if you just dropped the dirty clothes in water and poured some detergent and nothing happened. It is the friction, the agitation, that part that turns and rips everything it touches. Hopefully, it doesn't tear your clothes but it does throw them around.

It's that throwing it around and that disruption that gets your clothes clean. Sometimes we need agitators in society.

L: You mentioned that sometimes you would hold demonstrations. I have been trying to find some resources that document that what you guys have done. Is there any reason you feel like there is not a lot of documentation from certain news outlets?

I: The Alligator was intimately involved in a lot of what we were doing. I have a lot of my own collections of stuff from the Alligator. There would be particular things on campus where you would get more coverage. The Gainesville Iguana has a large archive of stuff because there were officials of the Iguana who were involved in our organization or whatever. There were members of the Iguana who were actually imbedded in the demonstrations associated with the Black History month. They were getting it firsthand.

My philosophy towards the press is that you use the press, you don't allow the press to use you. I probably have to take some responsibility for not always not having press coverage because I don't think press coverage is good.

I am more interested in action that transforms the minds of the community and creates institutions and does stuff. I think sometimes people are press chasers in the same way that lawyers can be ambulance chasers. I was one of those people where we would release statements to the press if they asked us for something, but in our organization – much like the Panthers – we had a rotating leadership where we didn't identify any one person as a leader and we didn't always respond to press inquiries unless we thought it was constructive for what we were doing.

Sometimes the press didn't publish certain things because they didn't know certain things. My thing was if the press needs to know when we were having a rally, we would publicize that and send out press releases and whatever and of course, they had the discretion to advertise it or not.

We weren't always the most press friendly because I never saw the press as a friend to oppressed communities. I think there are independent publications, like the Iguana that do an important service. Now you have much more television and radio, but we were still in a predominately press era when we came on.

I think that the reason we didn't have a lot of press is that the little press that we got from main stream press were always wrong and always negative. If you asked most people their image of the Black Panthers or their image of anything that is trying to change the community through social change, if you go to the mainstream press, it tends to be negative, because the main stream press represents the economic and social interests of the elite.

If you are trying to deconstruct the elite or challenge the elite, they control the press and they control the image that you are going to get. You're probably better off saying to them as little as possible.

I think one of the reasons that many social movements and efforts don't go very well in a community is because we have too many so-called leaders that chase cameras and don't realize that you live and die by the soundbites and whatever comes out of the cameras. Sometimes you get so focused on press conferences and cameras and all of this stuff, that you don't actually get to the word. One of the things I'm proud about the 99 is that we did a whole lot of work in a very short period of time with the limited number of people. That would've been impossible if we were all chasing cameras.

L: Yeah, its funny how they think that after Black Thursday that everything was perfectly fine in terms of race relations here at UF.

I: Right. Yeah. The view seems to be that racism doesn't exist. It's a proximity thing. I used to spend a lot of time working with the Red Stockings organization and a lot of the feminists and we shared stories about historical activism.

Carol Giardina was one of my closest friends back in the old days. We would sit and talk about this proximity thing, which is that sexism doesn't exist until I encounter it as a male. Racism doesn't exist until I encounter it as a white man. That was the challenge at UF.

UF was largely oblivious to the consequences, for example, of giving a student government budget control. At that time the student government controlled about 6 million dollars because it also controlled the student union. You have to keep in mind that most universities don't allow students – they may have some influence, but they don't get to control it directly like UF student government did.

In fact, there would be massive amounts of money in the UF student government elections because people saw the student government election at UF as a stepping stone to Florida politics because there was so much money and so much influence involved. You basically had an extremely unrepresentative student government.

So, naturally every time you brought up issues about Black History Month or women's issues or issues of Native Americans – these people would be like, "We don't know anything about that. We're not interested in that."

They would either vote not to fund it or to fund it less. On the other hand, the ski club would get like 20 thousand because everyone was in the ski club. That kind of stuff would go on year after year after year.

Different members joined the NAACP, they joined the different bodies – I ended up being the Black history chair of the Black Student Union. Our notion is that we are not going to beg these people, they are going to have to give us the proper respect that we are entitled to as students and people who contribute to this money.

When that didn't happen, it was very interesting because basically the BSU morphed into the BAM – the Black Awareness Movement. What basically happened is that all the leaders that had been conditioned to basically to beg the student government and accept whatever they gave us, were kind of escorted out of office. Those of us who weren't going to stand for this – that group took over.

BAM was born out of the BSU, but it came because the BSU had failed to represent the interests of the people. There were BSU officials at the time, who were like, "Well I guess we can try again next year!" I was like, "Um. No, no, no."

I always tell people that what happens is a lot of these organizations that have been conditioned to have a begging posture have to be transcended by organizations that are like, "No, we demand our rights." That's what happened and BAM became way more powerful and larger than BSU had ever been.

From VENEZUELA, p. I

ed. They include open warfare; covert intelligence operations; instigation of unrest; support for armed groups; manipulation of mass and social media; bribery of military and civilian officials; targeted assassinations; false-flag operations; and economic warfare aimed at collapsing civilian life.

These measures are illegal under the UN Charter, and they typically result in ongoing violence, lethal conflict, political instability, and deep suffering of the civilian population.

The case of Venezuela

The recent United States record with respect to Venezuela is clear.

In April 2002, the United States knew of and approved an attempted coup against the Venezuelan government.

In the 2010s, the United States funded civil society groups actively engaged in anti-government protests, notably in 2014. When the government cracked down on the protests, the US followed with a series of sanctions. In 2015, President Barrack Obama declared Venezuela to be “an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States.”

In 2017, at a dinner with Latin American leaders on the margins of the UN General Assembly, President Trump openly discussed the option of the US invading Venezuela to overthrow the government.

During 2017 to 2020, the US imposed sweeping sanctions on the state oil company. Oil production fell by 75 percent from 2016 to 2020, and real GDP per capita (PPP) declined by 62 percent.

The UN General Assembly has repeatedly voted overwhelmingly against such unilateral coercive measures. Under international law, only the Security Council has the authority to impose such sanctions.

On 23 January 2019, the United States unilaterally recognized Juan Guaidó as “interim president” of Venezuela and on 28 January 2019 froze approximately $7 billion of Venezuelan sovereign assets held abroad and gave Guaidó authority over certain assets.

These actions form part of a continuous United States regime-change effort spanning more than two decades.

Recent United States global escalation

In the past year, the United States has carried out bombing operations in seven countries, none of which were authorized by the Security Council and none of which were undertaken in lawful self-defense under the Charter. The targeted countries include Iran, Iraq, Nigeria, Somalia, Syria, Yemen, and now Venezuela.

In the past month, President Trump has issued direct threats against at least six UN member states, including Colombia, Denmark, Iran, Mexico, Nigeria and of course Venezuela. These threats are summarized in Annex I to this statement.

What is at stake today

Members of the Council are not called upon to judge Nicolás Maduro. They are not called upon to assess whether the recent United States attack and ongoing naval quarantine of Venezuela result in freedom or in subjugation.

Members of the Council are called upon to defend international law, and specifically the United Nations Charter.

The realist school of international relations, articulated most brilliantly by John Mearsheimer, accurately describes the condition of international anarchy as “the tragedy of great power politics.” Realism is therefore a description of geopolitics, not a solution for peace. Its own conclusion is that international anarchy leads to tragedy.

In the aftermath of World War I, the League of Nations was created to end the tragedy through the application of international law. Yet the world’s leading nations failed to defend international law in the 1930s, leading to renewed global war.

The United Nations emerged from that catastrophe as humanity’s second great effort to place international law above anarchy. In the words of the Charter, the UN was created “to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind.”

Given that we are in the nuclear age, failure cannot be repeated. Humanity would perish. There would be no third chance.

Measures required of the Security Council

To fulfill its responsibilities under the Charter, the Security Council should immediately affirm the following actions:

1. The United States shall immediately cease and desist from all explicit and implicit threats or use of force against Venezuela.
2. The United States shall terminate its naval quarantine and all related coercive military measures undertaken in the absence of authorization by the Security Council.
3. The United States shall immediately withdraw its military forces from within and along the perimeter of Venezuela, including intelligence, naval, air, and other forward-deployed assets positioned for coercive purposes.
4. Venezuela shall adhere to the UN Charter and to the human rights protected in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

In Closing

Mr. President, Distinguished Members, Peace and the survival of humanity depend on whether the United Nations Charter remains a living instrument of international law or is allowed to wither into irrelevance. That is the choice before this Council today. Thank you. ☀

Spotlight on: Alachua County Democratic Socialists of America

Democratic Socialists believe both the economy and society should be run democratically to meet human needs, not to make profits for the wealthy. Alachua County DSA is spreading socialism from Archer to Waldo and everywhere in between.

Working together, a better world is possible. DSA stands against the barbarism of fascist imperialism and seeks the freedom, equality, and true democracy that only socialism can bring.

If you are interested in checking out the local chapter, please reach out at alachuadsa@gmail.com, visit the website alachuadsa.org, or come to one of the events. See page 18 for more information about DSA and dates of the upcoming events. Join today, and help get to work making this better world a reality. ↗

WildFlowers Music Park: A place to remember and protect

by Robert "Hutch" Hutchinson

In this season when our world feels fragile, WildFlowers Music Park is a place that reminds us what we're trying to protect.

On 270 acres in Melrose, where sandhill meets cypress and shady groves ring wildflower meadows, a nonprofit experiment is taking root. It's a counterpoint to our turbulent times, grounded in the values of hard-won moral clarity, protecting our land, lifting up our spirits, and committing to peace, justice, and community-building.

WildFlowers Music Park is, at its heart, a conservation project. Restoration and stewardship, rather carving the land into little pieces, is the park's non-profit mission. This means planting and nurturing native trees, flowers, and grasses, removing invasive species, and returning "good fire" to the land.

This is conservation with a conscience where our trails and gathering spaces will be a refuge both for wildlife and for people who are seeking alternatives to the isolating and divisive influences in our lives.

The park is a place to gather, heal, and create. Our inaugural WildFlowers Festival of Music and Dance, scheduled for March 13-15, will turn that mission into a living experience. Inspired by other community-rooted gatherings, the annual festival will offer camping beneath the trees, single-day and full-weekend passes, and a mix of roots, folk, world, and genre-crossing bands. But it's not just about passively partaking of music; it's about moving with it, and creating it together around campfires under the stars.

Our festival village will welcome all generations. A Kids Zone will be full of art, stories, and nature play. The Teen Outpost, designed with youth input, will be a place to gather, create, and feel trusted. Bodywork and mindfulness will be offered by practitioners who know that peace in the world is linked to peace in our bodies and minds. Food vendors, local artisans, and community organizations will round out
